

MALADY MOWS DOWN INFANTS

INFANTILE PARALYSIS AND SPINAL MENINGITIS ARE PREVALENT IN CLEVELAND.

Cleveland, Oct. 11.—Infantile paralysis is becoming epidemic throughout the East End. Associated with it are cases of cerebro spinal meningitis and of a third neurotic disease which had not yet been identified and which in many ways seems more dangerous to children than either of the others. Ten deaths of children from these diseases have been reported to the Cleveland board of health within the past few days, most of them from the East End neighborhood on Euclid avenue. The epidemic has spread across the border into East Cleveland. The number of deaths as reported to the authorities does not indicate the prevalence of these diseases. Other recent deaths of children who did not show the more characteristic symptoms of either cerebro spinal meningitis or infantile paralysis, and were assigned to other causes, are now thought by attending physicians to have been due to some form of infantile paralysis.

Two Remedies Tried.

The epidemic has not been much more severe in the Italian settlement about Mayfield road S. E. and Murray Hill road S. E. than some other parts of the East End of the Forest City.

Ten cases have come under the observation of Dr. Joseph Tanno, 2081 Murray Hill road S. E. Dr. L. A. Wheelock, whose office is at 12012 Euclid avenue, two blocks away, has had three cases. Three cases of infantile paralysis now attended by Doctor Tanno are under a modern electric treatment which has been found to give some relief from effects of the disease, which for many years was thought to be without a cure. The cases of cerebro spinal meningitis have been given the serum discovered a few years ago by Dr. Simon Flexner of the Rockefeller institute, when this disease was without a cure.

Attacks Spinal Cord.

Infantile paralysis, which is at this time more prevalent than cerebro spinal meningitis has been regarded as less dangerous to life. Both are contagious diseases, which attack the spinal cord or its covering membranes. The meningitis extends to the brain. It is accompanied by spasms, and the child becomes gradually worse, generally after an illness which has been severe for several days. Permanent paralysis of one or another part of the body has frequently remained after recovery.

In infantile paralysis, the paralysis comes upon the child before the parents realize that it is seriously ill. There is a slight fever as in teething. Then it is discovered that the child is unable to move one or another of the extremities. The disease destroys cells in a part of the spinal cord which control motor muscles, and while the child generally recovers, the paralyzed part ceases to grow and gradually withers.

LAD IS HELD FOR SLAYING

Boy of 15 Charged With Killing Little Sister, and Parents Are Also Arrested.

Asheville, N. C., Oct. 11.—Charged with the murder of his 13-year-old sister, Ernest Webb, 15, was locked in the county jail, a week after the alleged commission of the crime. Mr. and Mrs. George Webb, the parents, are in the custody of a deputy sheriff, charged with being accessories before and after the fact. The parents gave out a report that the boy had accidentally killed his sister while playing with a shotgun. It is now charged that the lad deliberately killed his sister with his father's shotgun.

MOB LYNCHES COLORED MAN

Follows South Carolina Sheriff in Automobiles and Hangs His Prisoner to Telephone Pole.

Greenville, S. C., Oct. 11.—A mob in automobiles pursued the sheriff and deputies who were hurrying a negro to the jail at Spartansburg. They overtook the officers near Honea Path, seized the prisoner, hanged him to a telephone pole and filled his body with bullets. The negro was rushed from Anderson by officers after an attack on a little girl. They beat the mob into this town by ten minutes, transferred their prisoner to another machine and departed.

Dorothy Arnold Expected Home.

New York, Oct. 11.—Dorothy Arnold has not returned to her home, 108 E. Seventy-ninth street, as was reported in newspapers here, but there was every indication in the home she is expected. The missing girl's two brothers, John W. and D. Hinckley Arnold, unwittingly gave the impression that, if they do not know already where their sister is, they expect to know.

SAYS WAR WAS SURPRISE

TURKISH OFFICIAL MAKES ASTOUNDING CONFESSION.

Declares Ottoman Empire Had No Plans Prepared for Campaign Against Italy.

London, Oct. 11.—Mahmoud Shevket Pasha, Turkish war minister, in an interview with the Daily Mail correspondent at Constantinople, made the astounding confession that Turkey had no war plans prepared for a campaign against Italy.

"This war burst upon us unexpected and unprepared," said the minister. "In the Ottoman general staff we have war plans prepared for campaigns against every one of our neighbors. They are renewed and altered if required every year. But for a campaign with Italy I assure you not the slightest outline of a plan existed. We are poor. Our budget will not allow us to provide for the military needs of the empire. We have to concentrate our forces in our European possessions, leaving the Asiatic and African provinces practically unprotected. We trusted for the safe guarding of Tripoli to international law and honor."

London, Oct. 11.—Bennett Burleigh wires his paper, the Telegraph, the following account from Tripoli, of the engagement there between the Turks and Italians:

"The Italians have won their first land action finely. Friendlies had given warning that the Turks would probably attack and try to enter Tripoli during the night. Ample precautions were taken to reinforce all posts and particularly the new works to the south about four miles off shore. The enemy were discovered about 1 a. m. advancing in two columns supported by field guns. Fortunately there was bright moonlight and the fleet judiciously assisted by watching with search lights all night. The Turks approached in good order to the number of several thousand, supported by native auxiliaries. When they were within a few hundred yards, marines from the works and trenches opened a tremendous rifle fire upon the enemy and were supported by machine guns and field artillery. The intended Turkish surprise entirely failed, but the Ottomans stood to their attack courageously, replying with heavy fire and striving to press home the action at first on the west. The Italian marines, however, were unshaken and undaunted and fought most brilliantly, firing with steady and deadly accuracy. They beat back every attempt of the enemy, standing as a rock tossing aside the wild sea surges. From 1:30 a. m. until 2 a. m. the rifle fire was fierce and continuous, after which it dwindled and later ceased. The enemy then retreated, having suffered severe losses."

Children Tell of Cruelty

Ragged, Dirty and Nearly Half Starved Youngsters Claim Mistreatment by Peculiar Sect.

Alton, Ill., Oct. 11.—Ragged, dirty and nearly starved, five children, ranging from three to fifteen years of age, told the police a tale of almost unbelievable cruelty, which they said they had suffered at the hands of a religious sect, known as the "Disciples of the Apostolic and Pentecostal Faith." The children, taken from here early in the summer by Mrs. Mary E. Hughes, one of the local leaders of the faith, claim they were held prisoners in the camp of the disciples and made to do all sorts of manual labor and threatened with death if they revealed any secrets of the "faith." Daisy Deshriely, 15, says it was the sentence of death that was passed on her that decided the children to make the break for liberty which ended in their rescue by the local authorities now seeking the persons responsible for the treatment of the children. The two elder girls, Daisy Deshriely and Mary Facon, told the police that they were forced to go four miles each day for their meals and often, cruelly whipped to "drive the evil spirit out of them."

J. Pierpont Dodges But He Is Too Late

J. Pierpont Morgan.

This, the latest photograph of the money king, was taken as he was about to step into the launch to take him out to his yacht, the Corsair. He had just sighted the photographer aiming the camera at him and started to "duck" his head, to spoil the picture, but he was unsuccessful, as can be seen by the circumstantial evidence of the picture itself.

Fair—But False

It was his first visit to New York and some of the sights filled him with wonder, while others filled him with awe. But when he went to the theater he settled quietly down for enjoyment, pure and simple.

Presently he observed that a long, fair, silken tress was hanging down the back of the lady in front of him.

"Excuse me, miss," he said, leaning over, "but your hair is coming down."

Slowly she turned upon him a cold and haughty stare.

"My hair!" she said, in tones of ice and acid-drip.

But the country visitor was not to be sunbbed so easily.

"Oh, I'm sorry!" he said, cheerfully. "But really at first, you know, I thought it was your hair!"

MAKING USE OF ONE'S CREDIT.

One morning last year I sat in the office of the head of a very large business, one of the shrewdest men I know. His cashier came and laid on his desk a report of the cash in the bank. The amount exceeded $400,000.

"That's a pretty big balance," said my friend to his clerk. "It's much more than we need in this business. But we have borrowed no money for several months, so I wish you would send to each of our banks a note for $100,000."

When the clerk went out I expressed surprise at this action. For a man to borrow $200,000, when he had more money than he could use, seemed to me a wasteful proceeding.

"I do it," he said, "to keep my credit alive. I want the banks accustomed to loaning me money. I want them to regard a good line of credit as a regular thing with me. Some time I may need it, and when I do I want to have it ready and waiting. An established credit is a big asset, and the only way to get and keep it is to constantly employ it."

I have thought of that action a good many times since. I had always prided myself on not borrowing money. And I paid cash on the spot for everything that I bought. I looked upon people who bought things on credit as rather poor financiers.

But a few months ago I wanted some money—a small amount and for only a month. I went to a bank where I had kept a deposit for over 15 years, and they asked me to deposit good bonds as collateral to the full amount of the loan. My friend could borrow by simply signing a note. I had to give ample security.—National Monthly.
